During the past four months, fierce battles have been witnessed in Dowfas, in the outskirts of Zinjibaar, between the Supporters of Shari'ah and the combined forces of the regime, consisting of three army brigades, fourth one of the national guards as well as the anti-terrorism force. The combatants of ash-Shari'ah Supporters earned a large amount of spoils after carrying out a number of operations against the regime's forces. Some of the spoils were heavy mortars, anti-aircraft missiles, few tanks, armored vehicles, large quantities of ammunition and others war materials. It seems that the Supporters of Shari'ah have completed an attrition level against the regime's forces and gained a lot of spoils of war according to the statement of one of ash-Shari'ah's Supporters commanders in the battlefield. The commander added: "The next stage is to pull the army directly into a bloody urban warfare within the city."

This will consequently strengthen the capability of the mujahideen who seek to deploy all of their forces in areas that are unexposed to airstrikes, unlike the face to face confrontation that took place in Dowfas.

The mujahideen's commander spoke of new tactics, including usage of mines and remote controlled bombs. Also appointing a special squad of snipers as well as preparing booby-trapped vehicles. He also mentioned that the war won't be centered only in Zinjibaar, but it will spread to other areas that might also reach to Aden.
